St. Annianus, Second Bishop of Alexandria

When St. Mark stepped from the boat onto dry land in Alexandria, one of his shoes was torn, and he took it to a cobbler. While the cobbler was sewing it, he drove the awl through his left hand and the blood began to flow, the man screaming with the pain. Then the Apostle of God mixed dust with his spittle and anointed the injured hand, and it at once became whole and healthy. The cobbler marvelled at this miracle, and invited Mark to his house. Hearing Mark's preaching, Annianus, for that was his name, was baptized, he and his whole household. Annianus showed such devotion and zeal for the work of God that St. Mark consecrated him bishop, and this holy man was the second Bishop of Alexandria.
